E-commerce giant developer seeks OK on $23.4M Groveland warehouse

It appears another big industrial project is in the works in town.

Atlanta-based Seefried Industrial Properties, a preferred developer of Seattle-based e-commerce giant Amazon.com Inc. (Nasdaq: AMZN), is seeking approvals to build a 359,290-square-foot warehouse in Lake County's Groveland, documents filed with the state showed.

The project – being referred to in documents as DFL8-Groveland Last Mile – is proposed for a 48-acre site northwest of Republic Drive and Independence Boulevard.

It's unknown if a tenant has signed a deal to occupy the space, and documents didn't mention if a general contractor or architect were selected. A Seefried representative was unavailable for comment.

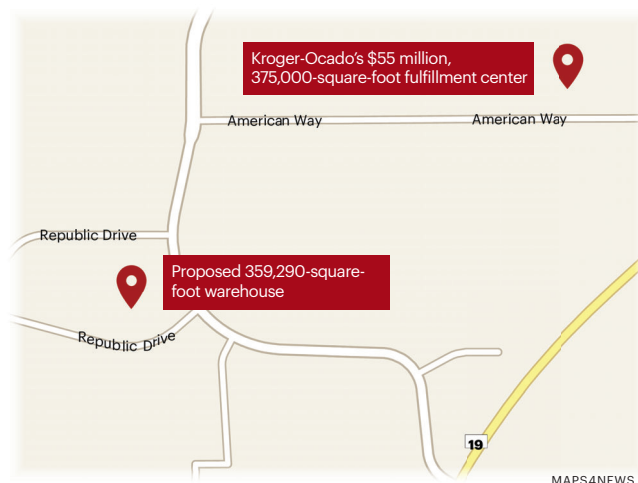

However, new construction is an important economic driver in Central Florida. It creates jobs, while also providing more space for companies involved in e-commerce, logistics, housing and other industries.

Atlanta-based industrial developer IDI Logistics LLC has owned the vacant Groveland site since September 2008, when it bought the land for $7.7 million, data from real estate research firm Reonomy showed.

And Los Angeles-based CBRE Group Inc. (NYSE: CBRE) was marketing the property for sale for $5 million in October 2019, real estate website LoopNet.com showed; CBRE representatives were unavailable for comment.

That said, a new CBRE marketing flier shows the site featuring either one 742,000-square-foot building, or two separate buildings of around 347,000 square feet and 369,000 square feet.

Additionally, the property is near Kroger-Ocado's rising 355,000-square-foot fulfillment center, which is expected to deliver The Kroger Co. (NYSE: KR) groceries to online shoppers statewide. The project is expected to provide a
